Field of the Invention The invention generally relates to the preparation and use of polyacrylic acid, which is prepared from polyacrylic acid precursor monomer. More specifically, the invention relates to a process for the preparation of polyacrylic acid having a low molecular weight. 2. Description of the Prior Art Polyacrylic acid is a widely used material in the photographic, chemical and fiber industries. For example, polyacrylic acid is used to form protective layers on photographic film for the purpose of lubrication, water permeability and abrasion resistance. Polyacrylic acid is used to form protective layers on other products such as paper, textiles and photographic paper. In these applications, polyacrylic acid may be used in film or in solution. Polyacrylic acid is used in amounts ranging from a few percent to about 30% by weight based on the total weight of the film, paper or other product. Polyacrylic acid is typically mixed with other polymers to form such films or solutions. High molecular weight polyacrylic acid can be prepared by homogeneously polymerizing a suitable acrylic monomer using an alkaline initiator. A high molecular weight polyacrylic acid which can be used in paper processing is, for example, ARALDITE® EX209 (available from Dow, Inc.). A high molecular weight polyacrylic acid, such as ARALDITE® EX209, is also known as f678ea9f9e
